Who was Jack of Newbury? (1489-1557) He made lots of Cloth & lots of Money • Jack was a poor homeless boy who had run away from Winchcombe Abbey in Gloucestershire. He called himself John Winchcombe. • He managed to get a job weaving cloth in Newbury. His boss was a merchant who would take the cloth to Flanders and sell it. It was then made into clothes. • Jack was a good businessman. He set up the first factory in England. He made more cloth than ever and became extremely rich. • He was famous. People called him 'Jack of Newbury'. King Henry VIII and Queen Catherine came to visit him. The King wanted to give Jack a knighthood, but Jack said no thank you. He wanted to stay humble like his workers. • Jack raised enough money to send a band of soldiers to join the English army fighting the Scots. Unfortunately, they turned up too late for the Battle of Flodden. • Jack rebuilt St. Nicholas' Church in Newbury. His monument can be seen inside. The end of his house survives off Northbrook Street.
